Atlantick is a proudly Canadian, award-winning, outdoor and tick-safety product manufacturing company. Rooted in science, innovation and evidence-based product development, Atlantick strives to offer safe, natural, effective solutions to help keep people, dogs and horses free from tick bites and the diseases they can spread.

In order to ensure we are able to provide the very best product possible we have partnered with scientists at Acadia University to test and develop our repellent formulas. We are committed to conducting ongoing research related to the repellency of ticks and other biting insects in order to provide you with products that are proven to work. Through our partnership with Acadia University, we've been able to improve upon our original spray formula to produce an all natural tick repellent that is over 97.5% effective.
